No, I do not think that hams with Novice license class for more than 20 years should be upgraded. The reason for this is the FCC still mandates that no-code techs such as my self are forced to pass an obsolete 5 wpm code test to have HF privileges on 10 meters. Why let Novice class have 2 meter privileges when they have not passed the written exam. But then again the FCC has no logic they let licensed hams use 10 meters. Unlicensed individuals use 11 meters and again have licensed hams have 12 meters. Tell you what, 60% of us hate code. Eliminate the code test and do whatever you want. Besides what separates myself and other no-code Techs from Techs that have 5-wpm, Not a thing. One likes code, the other does not! Sounds like discrimination to me?
